MUSICAL COMEDY AT CRAWFORD. From serious drama to musical comedy was the long jump which the Glass Stock company made with success at the Crawford theater last night. George M. Cohan's "Forty Five Minutes From Brondway." with its pleasing song numbers and rapid fire comedy was presented with all the swing of the Cohan production. While no claims have been made by Irene Shiftley and Audira Aiden, who play the leading roles with the Glass players, that they are prima donnas, they demonstrated that they sing as well as act.

As Mary Jane Jenkins, the house-maid, Irene Shirley is splendid in both the droil roll and in the more vivacious lines and scenes with Kid Burns, secretary to Tom Bennett, who inherited the fortune which was rightfully Mary's. Kid Burns, with all his slang phrases of New York, during his brief stay in New Bechelle, a country town only 45 minutes from Breadway, falls in love with Mary. Although he had been a companion of Bennett's for five years, when he finds a will bequesthing the fortune to Mary, he gives her the will and starts away without asking her the question uppermost in his mind. the fortune to Mary, he gives her the will and starts away without asking her the question uppermost in his mind. Suspecting that Eurns had won her affection, knowing of the will, Mary's pride is butt, but when he informs her that the knowledge that she had a million in her own name prevented him from asking her to become his wife, she tears up the document and their happiness is suspense. As kid Burns, Walter P. Hichardson, a new member of the Glass company, portrays the Cohan character in excellent manner. Mr. Richardson has just joined the Glass company and as "Kid Burns," he was, in the language of the "Kid" himself, "the real goods," and from almost his very entrance a favorite. Mr. Richardson is young, handsome, a finished actor, and dances and sings topical sories in a way that will "work him to a shadow" before the week is over. He has brought to the Glass company warmth and magnetism, and as a leading man should be very popular.

ENGLAND DRAFTS ANOTHER NOTE IN CANAL CONTROVERSY Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—Sir Edward Grey's rejoinder to secretary Knox's last note regarding the Panama canal tolls question practically has been completed and its substance at least is expected to reach Washington this week. It is understood that this last note by no means settles the controversy, nor does it contain assurances of an acceptance of the special commission, supposed to be created by that convention. CORRESPONDENT asks a question which appears to be perpetually puzzling to a great many people, and since the answer involes one of the most important rela-PAVING STARTS ON WEST tions between the sun and the earth, it is here given.

This is the question: "If, as astronomers say, the cause of winter is the low elevation of the sun, why them, since the sun is lowest in the south about the 22d of December, the winter solstice, does the temperature continue to fall after the sun has turned back north, and has been rising higher for several weeks? I should think it would be the coidest at the winter solstice, when the sun is lowest, and its rays fall the most obliquely."

Here is the answer: The cold of winter is due to two causes which act together first, to the low angle at which the sun's rays strike the earth, causing the same quantity of heat to be spread over a much greater area, and second, to the fact that when the sun is below the equator the lights in northern hemispheres are longer than the days.

and second, to the fact that when the sun is below the equator the nights in northern hemispheres are longer than the days.

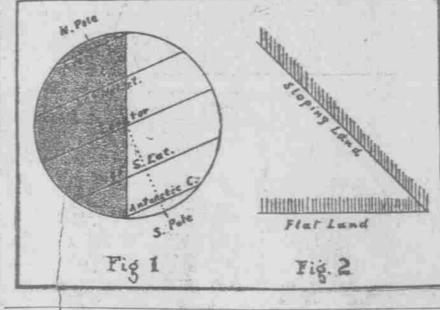

Let us take the second first. Look at the first figure, showing the north pole of the earth leaning away from the sun, as it does in winter, while the south pole leans toward it. The shaded side represents night and the other day. Starting from the equator, where day and night are always of equal length no matter what the position of the poles with reference to the sun may be, you percelve that as you go north the length of night increases as compared with that of day. At 40 degrees north latitude, which is the medium latitude of the northern United States, the difference is very evident on the diagram. At the time of the winter solstice, which is that here represented when the sun is 22% degrees south of the equator, the night hair and greatly promoted its growth.

Ask Your Doctor.

As you continue to go north the dirference increases, until when you have arrived at the Arctic circle, within 35% degrees of the pole, day vanishes completely, and it is all night. In the southern hemisphere, exactly the reverse occurs, so that they have their winter when we have our summer.

Now as for the

at 40 degrees north latitude is about line, then, represents the side of an four and a half hours longer than the day.

As you continue to go north the direction of a square much greater than acre, the upper one, containing the same number of stalks, must represent the side of a square much greater than the side of a square much greater than an acre.

The same thing happens with the sun's rays. They are equally numerous, whether they strike the earth vertically or slopingly, but when they fall slowingly they are spread ever a greater surface, and consequently their heating effect, for a given area, is less.

winter when we have our summer,

Now, as to the second cause mentioned above; look at the second figure. You know, no doubt, that corn stalks always grow up vertically out of the ground, whether it is a flat valley on a hillside. But a farmer will tell you that he can raise more corn on an acre of flat land than on a steep hillside, even if there is no difference in the fertility of soil. The reason is evident from an inspection of the diagram. The same number of stalks is represented on the upper part of the figure as on the lower part. But they cover more ground, because the sloping line is longer than the level one. If the lower
